BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS-P.M.

KIEL, June 24.—(By Atlantic Cable) Several more tons of powder than usual were loaded on his arrival today that must have warmed his genial Irish heart. The man from the Narrows until reached the dock, the man who has made a third attempt to lift the load of the roaring welcome of steam whistles, ringing cheers, music from many hands and greetings from many who boarded the big liner made way down the bay. Sir Thomas has a marvellous memory. He called to mind every number of the reception committee by name, and recited them all, and even some he had not seen for ten years. He gave his name to the "giant hand," and knew every whom he had met on previous trips. He told the newspaper agents he was glad he was to see them; they were the finest chaps in the world, and said no pictures could be had as good as some of the passengers aboard. The object was J. C. Morrison, who kept bobbing up and out of the doorway, adjacent, while Sir Thomas' speech took place. "Sir, I really had 'no sick coming,' in presence was forgotten in the welcome to the 'greatest sportsmen in the world.'"

During the running fire of talk on a female, Sir Thomas produced a mounted rabbit's foot.

"Then," he said, "with his genial smile, "that was given to me by a man in London. I think you people in America ought to take a photograph of it in order to make sure you won't lose it."

"Yes," replied Gen. Chaffee, who was of the Reception Committee, "the rabbit was not shot in the moon by a red-headed, negro in a cemetery somewhere in Arkansas, it isn't any good, it won't do, Sir Thomas."

Miss Elizabeth Moore, former national champion, meeting Miss Hall in the first round, was won with brilliant strokes. Miss Moore proved to be a winner. She scored many aces on her game angle strokes. Miss Hall's game appeared much weaker than in the preliminary. Score, 6-2, 6-0.

Then followed the event of the day, Miss Elizabeth Moore, former national champion, meeting Miss Hall in the first round, was won with brilliant strokes. Miss Moore proved to be a winner. She scored many aces on her game angle strokes. Miss Hall's game appeared much weaker than in the preliminary. Score, 6-2, 6-0.

On account of his popularity, it was expected that Hanlon would be a favorite, but much Yanger may come at the last moment that he may enter the ring a first choice. Yanger has a host of devoted followers in Chicago, who are very liable to send money here. When Hertz learned Hanlon was on the long end he said: "I am not surprised at this. Hanlon is very popular here, and Yanger will cut some figure. But this is Yanger's fight, and I found him that he has not been favorite. When he fought the best men of the country at Chicago he was always a favorite."

Hertz expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied with Yanger's condition.

Benny didn't box with Frankie Neal today, as his eye hasn't fully recovered from a jab from Corleil's glove.

JOHNNIE REIFF'S INJURY.

REQUIRES OPERATION.

BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.

CHICAGO, June 24.—(Exclusive Dispatch) Jockey Johnnie Reiff will have to submit to an operation to save his life, according to the information given out this afternoon. He was injured at Harlem by being thrown from Galba. It was thought at the time that his injuries were not serious, though his collar bone was broken and one side of his head was hurt. Now it develops that a clot of blood has formed in his head where an injury was sustained and it is this which must be removed to save the life of the famous rider of two continents. The operation will be a delicate one, but the physicians are hopeful their patient will pull through.

Reiff's name was widely heralded when he was ruled off the French club track. He was reinstated by the Western Jockey Club this spring, and has been riding at local meets with Thomas.

The man was Adt-Gen. Corleil, who was to welcome Sir Thomas, and President Roosevelt. Gen.

There was an invitation to Sir Thomas luncheon at the White House.

Gen. Corleil arrived in the Narrows, and was met at the pier by Sir Thomas, the Shamrock. She was followed by the Erin and Morgan, the Corsair.

Gen. Corleil said he had to arrive once more. He said he would have a spin out Saturday. In regard to the Shamrock he said, "I know you people have a boat, but the Shamrock III is a

NEWS AND BUSINESS.

Half Holiday.

The following Building and Loan associations have agreed to close their offices at noon on Saturdays, during the month of July and August: State Mutual Union Mutual Southern California, and the Protective Savings Mutual.

Evangelist in the East.

C. C. W. Ruth, assistant pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene, is conducting a campaign of evangelistic meetings in the East. At present he is holding meetings at Harvey, Ill.

Bursting Pipes.

"Crack, crack! Bust, bust!" go the water pipes in people's houses and in the streets, as a result of that ever-recurring trouble. The people who live in the plumbers' nests of houses and the cold comfort the populace gets from the waterworks boss is: "It can't be helped, and you must stand it."

Receiver Appointed.

The Los Angeles Trust Company was yesterday appointed by Judge Wellborn receiver for the bankrupt estate of S. P. Creasinger of the "barrel of bones" family. It is understood that this appointment was made upon agreement of all creditors. The bond required of the receiver was $5000.

Shriners' Reception.

There will be an informal reception and exhibition drill by Al Malakiah Temple at Hazard's Pavilion on Tuesday evening next at 8:30 o'clock. It will be the first appearance of the new fad—shriners' uniforms. The arrangements have been made for the transportation of the chorus to Long Beach.

A Chautauqua chorus of three hundred voices will be formed this evening at Blanchard Hall. Singers of experience are requested to join. The chorus will be assisted by an orchestra.

John R. Palmer of Union Deposit, Dauphin county, Pa., is thinking of coming to Los Angeles, and has addressed the following original composition to the Christian Committee:

"Dear Sirs: I thought that I would write to you and let you know that I would write to you for full information about your part of the world so please send me some information as I can see about it. Hoping you will think my Hoping to hear from you before long, etc.

OBITUARY.

George T. Cline.

John C. Cline, United States Collector of Customs for Los Angeles, yesterday morning received a message announcing the death of his son, George T. Cline.

Col. Cline died at the Mercy Hospital, corner of Calumet and Twenty-sixth street, early this morning. He was born in Chicago, Illinois, in 1862, and died at 12:30 a.m. on June 25, 1914.

He was the son of John C. Cline, who died in 1887, and his wife, Mrs. Mary Cline, who died in 1897.

Col. Cline was a uncle of John C. Cline, one of the old residents of Southern California, and a nephew of Col. Cline, who died in 1887.

place a pretty appearance. Music was furnished by the Santa Ana Orchestra,

Miss Alice McCorde rendered a vocal solo.

The invocation was pronounced by Rev. E. C. Conner of the First Methodist Church, and the commencement address was delivered by Rev.

Dr. Robert McIntyre of Los Angeles,

who spoke on the "Evolution of Lin coln," drawing a vivid picture of the great man's life, from accounts which he had personally obtained from friends of Lincoln.

The class was presented by Superin

President of the Board of Education.

Diplomas were presented by Dr. John Beatty, secretary of the board, and the exercises concluded with the rendition of the class song.

ASSEMBLYMAN AMERIGE SELLS A VACANT PATCH.

Cold-blooded Thief Makes Large Haul at Fullerton—Hundreds of Dollars Offered for Capture of Service or Maynard, a Smooth Forger.

FULLERTON, June 24.—Assembly man Amerige is looking for the man who deliberately stole a large patch of cabbage on his place east of town as were ever grown in this county, and as he believed they were ready to put on the market he met

William Shaft, a local produce buyer, yesterday and offered to sell the crop to him. A price was soon agreed upon and Shaft went out to have the cab ages cut and hauled to the station.

To his great surprise when he arrived at the Assemblyman's place he could not find a cabbage in the entire four acre field. When he recovered from the shock he returned to town and gentle broke the news to Amerige, who sighed deeply. "I am afraid you are color blind," said Amerige, "but you are color blind, such a thing would be possible." "I'll go out and show you the cabbage," said Shaft.

It is easy to raise salaries in this country, but it is difficult to increase the missionary work of our city officials is poorly advanced. After the first of July for I am grateful that the ordinance was passed at the next meeting, and at the first reading Tuesday, by the City Engineers' department will be regular salary of $15 or more. The expense of living is too much. The expense of these salaries raised is to the ordinance as to eliminate opposition, and it is all right. I am opposed to certain parts of the ordinance, and will fight them.*The Councilman then discussed the following: Superintendent of Schools will get $100 instead of $80 if this seems right. He has to pay a large amount, and is not allowed to keep the keep of the custom. In the case of the superintendent of the sewer the proposed lift from $50 to $75 is right, but take exception to the amount of Councilman. He said the amount of $100 was specified that the ordinance was to take effect July 1, it was voted to mean from the 1st of July this year by allowing him to do so. To give the transit men instead of $3.50 is hardly worth while. Too many stakes had been put on streets surveyed, it is necessary to do the work over through error. At $5 a day, Assistant Engineer Hammel will get $100 when the Mayor is getting $100.RAD. The blaze was started by the explosion of a gasoline stove. John Joughins was the owner of the property, and valued it at about $500. Years ago this place was the nucleus of its kind in all Southern California. All sorts of characters would congregate there after dark and make a perfect hell for girls who lived within blocks of the place as "Happy Valley," until recently the home of disreputable saloons and bawdry-on.HARBOR-TOWN BRIEFS.The Pacific Electric Railway Company has broken up camp in this city, after having had a large force of men employed in grading and otherwise preparing the new tracks of the electric road that is to run between here and Los Angeles. TOPEKA Creek Flowing Over Kansas Bridge—Legislators Wrangle Bill for Relief of Flood Sufferers

TOPEKA (Kan.) June 25.—A rain so heavy in volume that it was practically a deluge fell over Topeka during last night. A number of houses in south Topeka were washed away from their homes and few other houses were washed from foundations.

TOPEKA Creek, which was such a factor in destroying North Topeka, rose up with a rush and is to sweep over Kansas Avenue and bridge tomorrow. The Kank River is also rising.

TOPEKA (Kan.) June 25.—The speaker of the Kansas Legislature adjourned tomorrow at 2 p.m. No bill will be passed. A long session was convened tonight over a proposal.

that is to be organized money for the relief of the flood sufferers, many of the members insisting that it was a disgrace to Kansas to ask for outside assistance when there was plenty of money in the State treasury to meet the needs of the people. The bill was voted down by a small majority.

GOVERNMENT SENDS SEEDS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.] TOPEKA (Kan.) June 25.—Over 750 pounds of garden seeds were received in Topeka by mail today for the benefit of flood sufferers. This is a contribution of the United States Department of Agriculture to the relief funds. The seeds were turned over to the County Commissioners for distribution.

FIRST TRAIN OVER BRIDGE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.] KANSAS CITY, June 25.—The first train over the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul bridge since the flood, crossed the Missouri River on the restored bridge today. Street-car service to Kansas City, Kan., on one of the three lines will be resumed next Saturday. Owing to the flooded water supply, the police have forbidden the use of fireworks and firearms. This will prevent the usual celebration of the Fourth of July. Even firecrackers are not permitted.

THE CLEVELAND FAMILY.

PRINCETON (N. J.) June 25.—Former President Cleveland and his family left here today for Gray Gables, Bar Harbor, where they will spend the summer. They will return to Princeton October 1.

CALIFORNIANS FOR EUROPE.

NEW YORK, June 25.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Californians who sailed for Europe today by the Friedrich der Grosse were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baer and Miss Josephine Baer of San Francisco; William J. Egan of San Diego, Charles Wagner of Oakland, Fabian Altmann, Mr. and Mrs. A. Beschle, U. Boucke, Mr. and Mrs. C. Lachnit and child, San Francisco. Those who will sail tomorrow by the steamship Vandalia are Chauncey S. Goodrich, Misses F. J. and E. E. Goodrich of San Francisco.

"Then I will take it," said Emperor William.

Some bottles of champagne were then opened. After a quarter of an hour's general talk, the Emperor left the battleship, and Admiral Cotton assembled the entire ship's company and addressed them as follows:

"The Emperor has inspected the ship quickly, but very thoroughly. His Majesty is a judge of all technical naval matters. He expressed himself as greatly pleased with what he saw. I thank the officers of crew of the Kearsarge for the condition of the ship, hope every man here will remember that he is a representative of the United States, and that we will conduct himself in such a manner as to bring credit upon his country and his flag. We are here by orders of the President. It is our duty to do all in our power to preserve the feeling of friendship and cordiality between the United States and Germany."

"Three cheers for His Majesty, the Emperor."

The 700 officers and men of the Kearsarge therupon gave three hearty cheers for Emperor William.

CORDIAL BEYOND EXPECTATIONS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.] WASHINGTON, June 25.—Secretary Moody has received a cablegram from Rear-Admiral Cotton, telling of the reception of the European squadron at Kiel by Emperor William, and saying

The Rochester heirs appeared before Surrogate Thomas and asked for revocation of the ancillary letters granted to the Public Administrator of St. Louis. Hearing of this motion will come up August 25.

Meantime the Rochester heirs applied to the surrogate of Monroe county for administration papers, on the ground that the deceased was a resident of Rochester. On this application Michael H. Fitzsimmons was appointed temporary administrator, and he, in turn, made demand upon Clews & Co. for the money. Clews & Co. have refused to pay, and suit has been instituted to test the matter.

COATS USED DYNAMITE.

Horrific Suicide of a Former Prominent Railroad and Club Man of Brunswick—Plant System's Agent.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.] BRUNSWICK (Ga.) June 25.—George Coats, a former prominent railroad and clubman of this city, committed suicide near Urbana, a suburb of Brunswick. Coats used dynamite, and his body was mangled into an almost unrecognizable mass. The body was discovered today in an unrefereed location in the woods.

Coats, for years, was general agent of the plant system in the city. Afterward he became attached to the Brunswick and Birmingham Railway as auditor.

B'nai B'rith Petition to be Sent to Russia—Philippine Cable—Canal Affairs.

BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In regard to the President's attitude toward the nomination for Vice-President, it is stated definitely that he does not propose now, nor at any other time, to interfere in behalf of one candidate as against another. He believes that this is a matter that should be left to the convention, and he proposes that the convention shall have the naming of his running-mate without any advice from him.

The President's friends believe that long before the date of the next national election, the people of the country will have made up their minds as to what postoffice scandals, and that in arriving at their decisions, they will give full credit to the President for the course that he has pursued in connection with them. They point to the fact that the scandals have been restricted to three bureaus of the department, and that the men most concerned in the frauds were old appointees, many dating back to Cleveland. They also call attention to the fact that just as soon as the President had any suspicion that there was corruption in the postal service, he ordered that these should be a thorough housecleaning. Then came his recent selection of two such eminent reformers as Charles J. Bonaparte and Holmes Conrad to direct the proceedings against the wrongdoers.

The Russian Army. By Frank G. Carpenter.

THE CZAR'S SOLDIERY.
THE GREATEST MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT OF THE WORLD.
From Our Own Correspondent.

HE Czar is in favor of universal peace, but he has the largest army of the world. He has more officers than we have officers and men in our regular army, and even in these piping times of peace his troops exceed one million. Should war be declared, it could increase them to five millions, and could put over the field 500,000 of the best horses in the world.

For the past thirty years, military service has been obligatory upon all Russians. Every boy on becoming of age is liable to service, and there are $70,000 new recruits every year. Of these 219,000 are taken into the army and fleet, and of the rest the majority go into the militia. They serve off and on until they are twenty-three years old, and are always ready to be called out in case of war.

It takes a vast number of troops to keep this great dusa, and farther along a noble Russian in the swell uniform of one of his majesty's pet regiments.

Among the Cossacks.

I am much interested in the Cossacks. They are dark-faced, rough-looking fellows from about the Black Sea. There are about 3,000,000 of them all told, and they furnish 150,000 men for the army. They are sent out by the various Cossack states, each of which equips, clothes and arms its own soldiers. They belong mostly to the cavalry, and are among the finest horsemen of the world. Indeed, it is said that the average Cossack can ride bareback, standing up like the athlete of the circus.

These men are professional soldiers, and the Czar keeps as many of them as he can in the army. They are loyal, but are very independent, and are better treated than the other soldiers. They know but one thing: that is, to obey; and they will fight to the death. It was these Cossacks who gave Napoleon so much trouble when he retreated from Moscow. They hung about him and kept up a continual attack. When the French soldiers threw away the gold and silver they had stolen at Moscow, Russia has a large number of military schools. It has academies which will rank with West Point, and also subordinate schools for every branch of the service. There are three such schools in St. Petersburg and one in Moscow. St. Petersburg has a cavalry school, an artillery school and a school for military engineering.

Some of the best of the recruits get into these schools, and they are also attended by the sons of the nobility and military officials. About 3000 new officers are needed every year, and the increase of the service, owing to the pushing forward of matters in Asia, gives many chances for advancement.

One Cent a Day.

On the whole, however, there is little inducement for a poor man to go into the Russian army as an officer, and none whatever for him to serve as a soldier. The common private does not receive, all told, more than 1 cent a day the year through, although his food and clothes are found. His regular allowance is little more than a pittance a year, but he has other extras which bring it up to a little less than $4.

Think of $4 a year for spending money, including rations and drinks, and you have the condition of 900,000 of Russia's million men. Of course many get money from home, but the families of others are too poor to send them any. Do you wonder at the occasional extortion? I don't. The officers are a little better paid, but not much. A lieutenant in the infantry gets about $200 a year, a captain about $300 and a major $450. The officers are expected to receive support from their families, and if they marry, it must be with girls who are rich.

$6,000 for a Russian Husband.

An instance illustrating this occurred some years ago when the daughter of one of our ministers to St. Petersburg wedded a Russian officer. The officer came to America, and before the wedding, called upon his prospective father-in-law and demanded a settlement.

"What settlement do you want?" asked the old man, who was rich.

"I want a settlement upon my wife," was the reply. "I suppose that you intend to give her something to support the family."

"I had not thought of that," said the old man. "And how much do you think she ought to have?"

"Well," said the colonel, with a hem and a haw, "it seems to me she ought to have about a hundred thousand rubles ($50,000), but two hundred thousand would be better."

"Indeed," replied the old gentleman, "that is a good round sum, and such things are not customary here, but I will see about it. He did see about it, and as the story goes, he raised $50,000 and put it in the bank before the wedding took place.

A Russian Soldier

In the fortifications of Kronstadt

With the Artillery

the frontiers are enormous. During this war 200,000 men were sent into Siberia and the wall of fortifications has to be kept up along the frontier to guard against invasion from Europe. The frontier guard now amounts to 35,000 men, and in vast numbers have to be scattered throughout the United States and the Russian territories in Asia.

With the Recruits.

As it is now, every family in the Russian empire has something to do with the army. There are in all about twenty-five million families. They are recorded and a record is kept of all births and deaths. The ages of the boys are watched and every year a call is issued to those who are twenty-one to come forth for inspection. They draw lots, and two hundred and fifty thousand of them are put into the regular service, while the most of the others are assigned to the militia. Those in the active army serve five years, and later on have eighteen years in the first and second reserves.

The Russian army is one of the great civilizing forces of this country. The peasants are very ignorant, and there are but few schools. Those drafted into the army are taught to read and write, and they are sent back home with new ideas gotten through their service in different parts of the Russian world. Indeed, the change is so marked that a man who has had military service can command twenty-five per cent higher wages in almost any pursuit than those who have not served.

I am told that most of the higher officers are rich. They are the sons of nobles or well-to-do families, and they constitute to a large extent the aristocracy of the country. They are spirited fellows and high-livers. Many of them gamble, and some are very extravagant. The social standard of military men is very high all over Europe, especially in Germany, where they are fast building up a military aristocracy. It is less so here, and there is more chance for the ordinary soldier to rise to a good position.

Russia has some excellent cavalry. The men ride like Texas cowboys, and their horses are among the finest in the world. The common cab horses of the Russian capital are better than the swell carriage horses of Washington. They are Orloff stallions, as black as coal, with fine action and great speed.

There are splendid horses all over Russia, and indeed the empire has more horses than any other country in the world. According to the statistics of our Agricultural Department, all the horses on earth number about 65,000,000. Russia alone has 30,000,000, or, estimating four persons to each family, about one horse to every family in the whole empire.

The most of the Russian horses belong to the peasant farmers, but a vast number are found on the steppes

STREET TREE PLANTING. SOME MATTERS OF CHANCE AND CHOICE CONSIDERED.

By Belle Sumner Angier.

NOTE.—Querist properly and clearly stated, addressed to the House Beautiful department in care of The Times, and which information will be answered, as far as possible, either in these columns or by personal letter. Answers will have frequently to be deferred for a week or more.

PLANTING TIME.

It is not too late for the planting for fall blooming of coreopsis, asters, scarlet flax, phlox, mignonette, cosmos and stocks.

Satisfactory Sidewalk Trees.

Choice and variety depend largely upon locality. Miss Sessions of San Diego is looked upon as extremely conservative in her choice of trees for street planting. She especially advocates Eucalyptus robusta, Acacia melanoxylon, and Acacia floribunda. Where a small and formal or pepper tree, and in spite of the slight objections raised to it by growers, I think it very distinctively a suitable tree for our climate. In Riverside one long avenue near Arlington has been allowed to grow absolutely untrained, and one might travel the world over and not find a more beautiful sight than these graceful foliated trees, locking overhead and their sweeping branches touching the ground. It is impossible to mention the many deciduous trees suitable to this part of the State, but they must be reserved for another time.

Trees Planting.

Trees planting is worthy of considerable thought. That is why I introduce the subject at this particular time. This is not the season for tree planting. There will be plenty of time to consider any suggestions that may be made in this article, or in several which will follow it between now and next January or February, which are the favored months for tree planting in Southern California.

"He who plants a tree plants to all eternity," providing he can keep the hands of the vandal off of his planting, but in most of our towns and villages it would appear that the matter of street trees does not depend so much upon kinds, soil and lack of desire to thus beautify, as it does upon care and protection after the trees are planted. About two-thirds of the tree planting done in Southern California has been like that of a certain garden I have seen in my travels. The owner is blessed with a superabundance of money and ideas. This would seem to be a delightful combination, but his garden does not luxuriate as might be expected. When I inquired the cause of the peculiar unhealthy look of certain trees and plants, the gardener confided to me (out of his master's hearing,) that he had moved, at the owner's orders, three, four and five times some of these, and that he had doubts if any of them would survive their strenuous and traveled experience.

It is a wise plan to build a dozen houses and their gardens on paper before you do it in reality—less expensive and more enduring results. The same rule is good for tree planting.

Vandalism Among the Trees.

I am indignant beyond description! When will the men of our town and city governments in Southern California come to recognize the "robbing Peter to pay Paul" system which is constantly going on our streets? It is bad enough to put down expensive sidewalks and street paving, only to tear them up again to put in new sewer systems or street railways, but when our citizens go to great expense for years in tree planting on the streets until they get them up to where their beauty is recognizable, and then some petty employee of a telephone line comes along and proceeds to destroy the tree for the benefit of his company, my soul revolts. At Pomona the other day I was horrified to see that the hand of the vandal had appeared even here, so near an intelligent community. In the little park near the railway station are, or were, two magnificent araucarias. This is a tree that should never be trimmed under any circumstances, although its lower branches may be "pinched back" a trifle where they are likely to take too much room. They taper exactly, and the removal of the tip or terminal bud has practically the same result that it does to take off the head of a promising young man. One of those Pomona trees had been ruthlessly headed, although the telephone line which it promised to interfere with could have been shifted just one foot north or south and gotten out of range. The other tree had been carefully denuded of all its lower branches to a height of twenty feet or so, and a sorry looking object the poor tree is. In my effort to secure a photograph I could not get out of range of a most glorious and artistic signboard of somebody-or-other's soft soap, and rather than to aid or abet the very decidedly commercial spirit of this educational center, (?) I have decided not to depict this a pretty bright orange and white blossoms, which would quickly get ugly board fence out of sight. I keep well watered. This would be a strong and at the same time the four small plants of camellia, aged evergreen vine, with inferior undertaken, and by the time the public concern, and when it does, I am tab grounds.

But I sincerely hope that some one in these lines and have those murdered burial, and as a memorial shall protect what are left of the town.

street tree planting it would seem California were doomed to a perpetual fusion. A continual change of people, the diversified tastes of a people who are, are apt to give our sidewalk planting a confused appearance. The best standards. Add to this the planting of one street superintendent is to be uprooted by the next, and so on. In this climate, too, constant and need to keep trees in condition. In the town in Southern California a block residence, and surrounded by a big garden with trees outlining the entire very beautiful spot. A few years changed hands, the house was removed from the orchard dropped. The tree became involved, and the plan took. Today a thrifty city, is all about the tract has its original planting half dozen acacia trees. A very little water would have saved to this tree.

Answers To Correspondents.

"In San Pedro, Cal.: Mina lobata is a quick-growing annual belonging to the morning-glory family, but with two inches deep. A safe rule to follow with bulbs is "their own depth below," though amaryllis and some others go in on top of the ground.

Never heard of red root tea for the purpose you speak of. I am sure you that your seedlings are "damping off." The gardeners term a habit of drooping and wilting which attacks young seedlings that are kept too wet.

Thanks for good wishes.

A Los Angeles Home.

HENRY KOCH'S RESIDENCE ON WEST TWENTY-FOURTH STREET.

By a Los Angeles Architect.

THE house herewith shown has been recently erected for Henry Koch, on the south side of West Twenty-fourth street, near Main street, in this city. The foundation is constructed of concrete and the first story of klinker brick of a bluish tint laid up with dark-blue mortar. The remainder of the exterior is covered with shingles and stained a soft brown color. The trimmings are painted white; the roof is stained a moss green, with which is harmoniously combined with red burlap hangings. On one side of the room, projects a square bay of generous dimensions, with clusters of small casement windows with leaded glass effects, a paneled seat and a large open fireplace faced with cream colored pressed brick, ornamented with a beautiful stucco panel in his relief, representing a scene from Homer's Illiad.

The paneled oak wainscoting of the dining-room is stained a deep green. The buffet with beveled plate, glass doors, the beamed ceiling with frescoed panels, and the fireplace, are the attractive features of the room.

All the principal rooms of the first floor, including the reception room, are frescoed in appropriate designs, and the floors are grained and polished with ornamental borders. All the windows are glazed with polished American plate glass, lending elegance to the interior as well as the outside of the house. The butler's pantry, adjoining the dining-room, is wainscoted and fitted up with drawers, dressers, lockers, cupboards and sink.

The kitchen is provided with all the best appointments such as cold closet, storage bins, tile wainscoted walls, etc. Back of the kitchen is a large screen porch, fitted with laundry tubs, hopper, etc. From this porch, a stair leads to the basement, which contains storage and fuel room, etc., and a furnace for hot-air heating, of the latest improved type.

The second floor contains five bedrooms with large, well-fitted closets, and linen closet, with shelves and drawers of white cedar. All clothes closets are provided with outside windows to afford proper ventilation, a point often overlooked or considered of minor importance.

The bathroom is fitted up with the latest improved enameled sanitary fixtures with exposed nickel-plated pipes and traps, also instantaneous water heater and shower bath. The floor of this room is covered with vitreous tile, and the walls are wainscoted with white glazed tiling 5 feet high.

The trimming of the bedrooms is in natural wood, the floors scraped, sandpapered and polished, and all walls and ceilings frescoed in various shades.

There are a large, well-fitted billiard room, a den and ample storage space on the attic floor, which is finished throughout in the same manner as the second floor. The house is lighted with gas and electricity and provided with speaking tubes. All doors and windows throughout the house are connected with a burglar alarm to announce the approach of the festive porch climber, and thus give the owner a chance to prepare a suitable reception.

JOHN P. KREMPFEL.

VEGETABLES WITH MAGNETIC POWER.

There has been discovered in the forests of India a plant which possesses astonishing "magnetic" power. The hand which breaks a leaf from it immediately receives a shock equal to that which is produced by the conductor of an induction coil. At a distance of 20 feet a magnetic needle is affected by it, and it will be quite deranged if brought near. The energy of this singular influence varies with the hours of the day. All-powerful about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, it is absolutely annihilated during the night. At times of storms its intensity amounts to striking proportions. Birds and insects never alight on this plant; an instinct seems to warn them that they would meet with sudden death. None of the magnetic metals are found where it grows, which is a proof that the electric force belongs exclusively to the plant.

over tree, and being the first set on a row down the street. It has to be bought on the block upsets me, fronting on his property, and no Italian blue gum. By and by C. wants a plant for "uniform street trees." It is trouble. The matter may have come when it does; is very likely. Ward of Public Works. Were I a man might be—public parks and sewerage to water supply and sewerage. The street superintendent should be in the making of the plans for thoroughfares. In this way there is no excuse of conforming to proper plan. He even made responsible for instance, that this plan would be in taxation, and securing the best in any town that will try it. Station of the greatly enhanced value of parks or of public parks, or of well-planned and very much out of proportion to the facilities we have found this method of insuring the best they have undertaken. The value of property about Woods is a single instance that comes to mind.

Planting Trees.

More than any other town in Southern California has a set aspect, and indeed her trees meeting overhand, and when I noted a spirit of commerce which appears to threaten the life of the forest, a row of orchard trees near the street line of trees. I mean so many boxes of oranges means, so much I am also absolutely certain that I can cut out their street trees. doubt single out the particular tree. They laid their largest golden eggs. They are drawn annually to Southern California because of its beautiful and magnificent tree growth. And yet no one seems to have more care and of these same avenues. Magenta is a single instance that comes to mind.

June and July are not the most satisfactory months for sowing bluegrass, but in your coast climate it is possible. You will need to be lavish with water, and in the "dog days" water at about 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. to keep the grass thrifty. Clover stands the heat much better than does the bluegrass.

As for the cypress hedge and the picket fence in front, I think I should sacrifice both. Unless you need the hedge for a windbreak, I think I would have it out.

If it is only with an eye to the ornamental, then by all means have it out, because replanting with thrifty young cypress would gain time and more satisfactory results. Now, for the sixth and last question—coreopsis, suns, asters, scarlet floss and mignonette are all possible for this season. Phlox and the many fine stocks are also satisfactory summer and fall bloomers. May you have a good summer and fall bloomers. May your summer garden flourish!

Mr. G. N. Santa Marin, Cal.: Have had no experience with "root tea" for roses. Have known that some men recommend soot and wood ashes as a fertilizer, but do not feel sure that it is the best.

(b) Gladiolus should be planted one and a half to harmonious effect. The interior, with the exception of the dining-room, is trimmed with white pine.

The piers supporting the front porch are solidly constructed of klinker brick and with red sandstone caps on top; the porch railing is of wrought iron, and the floor of red colored cement.

A massive oak door with beveled plate-glass panel opens into the spacious reception hall, around which the drawing-room library and dining-room are grouped. An artistic effect is obtained by the harmonious treatment of the various rooms in combination. The hall and vestibule is treated with a forest green effect. It has a paneled wainscoting to the height of the door casings, and the whole is finished with a plate rack. The stairs are recessed and are ornamental in character. There is a large leaded window of stained glass on the landing of the staircase, which sheds a pleasant light over both the upper and lower halls.

The drawing-room is treated with white enamel, and has an open fireplace, which is furnished with white enamel tile facings and hearth, and a mantel of colonial design. A pleasing effect of this room is the octagon bay window, forming a feature of both the interior and exterior of the house.

The library is treated with a darker shaded enamel,

KANSAS CITY, June 25.—The first train over the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul bridge since the flood, crossed the Missouri River on the restored bridge today. The cars were to be resumed next Saturday. Owing to the inadequate water supply, the police have forbidden the use of fireworks and firearms. This will prevent the usual celebration of the Fourth of July. Even firecrackers are not permitted.

THE CLEVELAND FAMILY.

WASHINGON, June 25.—Secretary Moody has received a cablegram from Rear-Admiral Cotton, telling of the reception of the European squadron at Kiel by Emperor William, and saying

"For Emperors," replied Admiral Cotton.

"Then I will take it," said Emperor William.

Some bottles of champagne were opened. After a quiet talk, the Emperor left to the Public Administrator of St. Louis. Hearing of this motion will come up August 25.

Meantime the Rochester heirs applied to the Surrogate of Monroe county for administration papers, on the ground that the deceased was a resident of Rochester. In this application, Michael H. Fitzsimmons, who represented the administrator, and he in turn, made demand upon Clews & Co. for the money. Clews & Co. have refused to pay, and suit has been instituted to test the matter.

was carefully placed in Bryson's hand. The burned one was tossed to the bay on the floor.

A wild whinny and the champing of door. Fay had been attracted by the noise seemed to regard them as beautiful she looked, as she stood there, laid back and her dark eyes glowed with admiration. Turning, he said, "She's as fine a bit of horse flesh as I ever seen. I would give a round sum for Gardner, "she belongs to our two daughters died when she was about to give her to the children, and they are tender nursing to bring her through, and she has grown to be this beautiful woman," interrupted Mrs. Bryson.

"I think not," was the reply. "Then I shall fight him to the end," said Mr. Gardner.

"Have you a copy of the mortgage?" said the Sheriff. "That would be a good thing."

A memory of the burned out flashed through Mr. Gardner's mind, but he had no remembrance of having seen or heard of it since it was thrown to the baby.

"And the witnesses," continued Mr. Grimes.

"My wife and David Stanton," replied Mr. Gardner, "and the Lord knows where Mr. Stanton is now, probably hundreds of miles away, and murdered and scalped by this time. Oh, the scoundrel! he knew what he was about!"

The Sheriff looked grave. "Things are certainly against you," he said. Then, turning to Gus and Gene, he patted their heads kindly, saying: "Don't be down-hearted, my dears; I will take good care of your colt, and if your father can prove what he says, you will soon have her again."

Soon Fay was led out and tied to the Sheriff's cart. The intelligent creature evidently knew that something was amiss. She struggled fiercely at her halter, and, turning toward Gus and Gene, whinnied wildly. This was more than the children's full hearts could bear, and they hurried away to hide their tears.

"Children," said their father, as they all gathered around him for the good-bye kiss, "hurry in every nook and cranny for that mortgage. There's no telling how much may depend upon it."

With sorrowful hearts and misty eyes, the children watched them drive away. It was some comfort to know that their father would be with Fay, but their hearts were heavy as they thought of her probable fate. The search for the lost mortgage was immediately begun, and did not cease until every spot and crevice in the little house had been thoroughly searched. But it was of no avail. "I fear," said Mrs. Gardner sadly, "that it has long since been destroyed. Who would have imagined that it would ever be of any use?"

The next two days seemed very long. Gus and Gene watched with feverish impatience for their father's return. When he came at last, the look upon his face gave them small encouragement. It was some comfort to know that Fay was well and was receiving kind care. "If we could only find the mortgage and Stanton," said the father, as they gathered sorrowfully about the fire, "we would be all right. I was out to see the Stantons, and they haven't heard from David for months. The trial comes off at 2 o'clock tomorrow." He did not tell the children all he feared. "There will be only our testimony," said he to his wife, after the children had retired, "and that will not go far against the mortgage and Fay's money. He is determined to have the colt at any cost."

The next morning Mr. and Mrs. Gardner took their place in the vehicle which was to convey them to the trial at Prairie Town. "Now children," said Mr. Gardner, "be good, and hope for the best. Time will not hang so heavily on your hands, Gus, if you're busy. You and Gene may hunt up something and make that tool box."

The Cairo Cabman.

The bizarre contradictions of Cairo are strongest in any of those streets, where trams with conductors in uniform convey men whose proverb is that "haste is from the devil," and where a scribe sits by the roadside arrayed in cheap tweed suitings and a French bow tie. It is the same with the beasts. This Cairo drives an arabah, his fellow goes abroad on a white ass, and their country cousin sways on a scornful camel, which carries men easily in the day over the Kaer-el-Nil bridge into the town. All the streets bear names in Roman and Arabic characters, and the Egyptian "cabby" has his circle, his fares by time and distance, and a fixed tariff for special drives all nicely painted in English, French, and Arabic on a white enameled iron plate after the manner of London. But a comparison between the Cairo "arabah" and the driver whom we know at home breaks down at this point. Unless intoxicated or commanded to drive to some obscure street in Whitechapel the ordinary "cabby" can find his way. In Cairo, however, your driver is certainly illiterate, and almost certainly ignorant of the names of the streets which are only a few years old. If you bid him convey you to No. 75 in the Sharia X he will look blankly at you and will ask your direction. Instead of sitting back with folded hands and looking about you, you must peer from side to side for the correct turning and stimulate your incurious driver by exclaiming at intervals "ya meenak" (to your right) and "shumalak" (to your left) till the desired house is reached. This presupposes that you know your way, for if you do not, you are helpless unless your repeated queries addressed to the passer-by are fortunate enough to meet with an answer that is of use.

Nights of Noise.

There is another difference, to my mind a happy difference, between Cairo and London, not to mention other European capitals. There are newspapers in Cairo, it is true, but they hide their light under a bushel, and you are often compelled to seek them in place of their pursuing you. The urchin who, at about 6 in the evening of the later, Mr. Gardner called upon in the office of the Cairo Post Office, "We'll see Fay, after all," said Gene gleefully. "But Gus" and her face clouded again, "how are we to get it here? The trial is at 2, and it's 11 o'clock now. There isn't a horse we can get anywhere."

"I know how we'll get it there, and in time, too," said Gus stoutly. "These legs weren't made for nothing. I'll get it there, if I have to run every step of the way."

The trial had begun. As Mr. Gardner had said, everything was against them. It was too evident that Fay would soon become the legal property of their unscrupulous opponent. The father's heart ached as he thought of his children's sorrow, but he had done his best. He felt choked, and the courtroom seemed close and stifling. He fled into an adjoining hall and picked up the morning paper that lay there. He began to read mechanically, but presently a paragraph met his eye that sent the blood dancing through his veins. It ran thus: "We are happy to announce in this issue that D. W. Stanton, a former resident of this place, is again seen on our streets. He has been assisting in putting down the Northern rebellion, but, having been wounded in a skirmish,

"We are happy to announce in this issue that D. W. Stanton, a former resident of this place, is again seen on our streets. He has been assisting in putting down the Northern rebellion, but, having been wounded in a skirmish,

Stories of the Firing Line. :: Stories of Animals.

Sunshine Saved Swords.

YOU remember, perhaps, remarked a veteran army officer, "the terms of surrender which Grant prepared for Lee to sign? They were notable,first for their terseness, as they crowded into a dozen lines what almost any one else would have spread over many pages; but still more for the fact that they were written in Grant's own hand; indeed, was substantially every one of his papers of the whole war—and while the party sat at the rendezvous. Horace Porter, our present Ambassador to France, was there as aide to the General. He tells me that at McLean's house Grant, after greeting Lee and his secretary, and after exchanging a few sentences of conversation with them, motioned them to chairs opposite the center table, and then seated himself and began to write. If he had been sending a casual note to a brother officer to dinner he could not have been less agitated, outwardly at least, and yet he was bringing to an end a war of four years' duration, one of the stubbornest and bloodiest in modern history, and one which, but for his success, might have changed the whole current of human civilization.He had just closed a sentence, as shown by the momentary cessation of the scratching on paper, when a little ray of light broke through an opening between him and the Confederate officers, and fell on Lee's sword hilt.
Ordinarily nothing would have resulted from this, for at that stage of the war the field uniforms and arms were in a pretty battered condition on both sides; so, in preparing for the culminating act in the drama that morning Lee and his secretary had discarded their old toggiery and dressed themselves in the best they had, including a jeweled presentation sword, which Lee probably never had out of its case before. The light falling upon this ornamented hilt was reflected with a piercing flash, which struck Grant full in the eyes. He had just raised them for an instant. Responsive to the flash, they sought the details of Lee's attire, and down they went upon the written sheet again, while there flowed from the nib of the pen the provision that the Confederates should be allowed to wear home their side arms. It was a fine illustration of the power of momentary suggestion."Not approved. If the captain hadn't been upset by a hog, his men wouldn't have been upset by him. The head being upset, the tail naturally rag away. Try again, but let some one lead who can smell a hog fifty feet away."—[Detroit Free Press.]

Rats on a Transport.

THE United States Army transport Sherman, while in Hongkong, contracted, as all good ships do, the rat habit. The sight of a rodent to a Manila health officer is on a par with the waving of a red rag in the eyes of a bull. So when the Sherman dropped her anchor in the bay, the official rat catcher was placed aboard her, but it was soon discovered that it would require all the ladrones in the islands to even make an impression on this rat ship. A consultation was held, and it was de cided to place a rat exterminator on the vessel and have him report before further action was taken. When all the provinces of the big white boat had been heard from, the returns indicated that there were at least one million rats aboard.This astounding statement staggered the officers, but only for a moment, for lo! there was the Marives quarantine station. The ship was at once placed under quarantine. The reptile began to fight pluckily, and while he fought he rattled loud and long. Three other snakes came to great speed and courage to his aid, and a dreadful war followed. The snakes, though they fought well, were all killed."Once this man saw seven hogs attack a rattlesnake.
The reptile began to fight pluckily, and while he fought
he rattled loud and long. Three other snakes came to great speed and courage to his aid, and a dreadful war
followed. The snakes, though they fought well, were all killed."The rattle is also said to charm, or hypnotize, so that the snakes can seize them easily, but in this case my friend doesn't take much stock. It's a call, he says, a call that the rattle is used most—a love call, perhaps,

Animal Friendships.

THE conclusion of a scientist that fishes probably do not suffer pain will be grateful to some sea anglers who are moved to pity by the floundering of their victims. It is natural for people to endow all animals with the qualities of man, including imagination (which is the source of his keenest instincts), and this disposition has been fostered by writers of fables and the Uncle Remmuses. At least we never Lytton's hero who saw reproach in the expressionless eyes of captive fishes, was unreasonable, and his enthusiasm about the intelligence of fish can feel is comparatively insignificant.Because it is virtually impossible that animals should possess imagination, it is impossible that they should experience anything like the pain the same circumstances would impose on a fairly sensitive human being.It was from this that an early school of highly intelligent Italian philosophers gradually reached the conclusion that all the lower animals are exempt from actual pain; that what seems like the expressions of suffering are but reflex or mechanical actions, and not intensity of feeling. Thus the frogs will make frantic efforts to escape from a source of irritation, and the entire brain has been removed, indicating that the unconscious nerve cells respond to an impression, but must be painless.It is not, however, the tendency of modern life to avoid pain that is responsible for the lack of sympathy with the animal kingdom. On the contrary, the literature and example of the humane occupants of the long row of officers' houses were presently astonished to see the most dignified of women coming up the avenue at a gait which was a compromise between her dignity and the desire to run, with a string of mules behind her, the head of each just touching the tail of the one in front of him.The woman was not afraid. She regards fear as a thing quite beneath her dignity; but she was startled, and increased her pace. The mule behind her increased his pace, also, and marched steadily along, with his nose just touching the back of the white parasol.

series of "snap shots." Madam's steps exceeded the pre pared army stride by about two feet, and her air of dignity was decidedly "on sideways." The photog

The Picturesque Trees of Italy.

WHEN the heart seeks broad oaks or cathedral trees, it is the North that calls, and if, in Italy, the feet of a northerner stray into some unlock-for-sua-socia, he finds himself presently thinking of home. For, in spite of great exceptions, forests of pine, or fir, or chestnut, the characteristic trees of Italy, are detached, sharply outlined, impressive from loneliness and contrast. In groves, in groups, in avenues, in files, in couples and singly they cut the sky, and it is the general treeliness of the landscape that gives to the infrequent trees their peculiar beauty. They are so defined and individual that one remembers the cypresses of a Tuscan city exactly as one remembers its campanili, and it would be as easy to forget the dome of St. Peter's as to forget the single palm tree of St. Bonaventura. I have even seen it from the Pincio Hill on a gray winter day, pale against a pale sky, yet distinct in outline as the convent itself. It looked lonely as a seventeenth century ghost, keeping uneasy watch between the advance of archeological excavation and of modern building. I shall always remember a May morning years ago, when, on the journey from Florence to Rome, by way of Arezzo, I made the discovery that the attenuated trees of Perugia are real, not fancied. It was my first lesson in the faithfulness of the Umbrian and Tuscan landscape painting.—[Scribner's Magazine.]

Sabot Cliff-Dwellers of France.

WE have often heard of the cliff-dwellers, and are accustomed to think of them as a prehistoric race, the remains of whose few scattered dwellings are a matter of curiosity to tourists, and a prize to antiquarians. Few people know that at the present day there are whole communities in France whose only habitations are hollowed in the rocky hillsides, and whose entire business life is carried on in caves.

We had seen in Normandy isolated instances of people living in habitations half house and half cave. But they were in faraway towns and villages, and only the very poorest class of people lived in them. Our first real city came as a great surprise, for we had just left Tours, one of the most highly civilized cities in France. We were riding on the road to Vouvré, when suddenly, at a turn near Rochecorbon, this first town of cliff-dwellers burst upon us.

Presently the wall opened and he appeared, his mask-like visage turning neither right nor left. With garments swaying rhythmically he walked to the chair and seated himself. A slave at his side fanned him with a white silken cloth, to defend his sacred master from imaginary insects. He whispered to the slave, who called to one of the ministers. Hurriedly he appeared, lowering his hood; then, after removing his slippers just back of His Majesty, presented himself, and after a short conversation was dismissed. Presently five gorgeously saddled horses were brought before their royal master, who, with a motion of his hand, chose one, the others being taken away, while he rose with great solemnity, and mounting, rode to all sides of the square, to be saluted by each body of soldiers. This ceremony completed, the musicians, armed with oboes and tomtoes, disturbed the atmosphere with a doleful prehistoric dirge, and the procession was under way. It was but an entanglement of artillery, infantry, flags, horsemen and court officials in a mad riot, but as in a thrashing machine tearing its insides furiously, the wheat, straw and chaff found their channels at once, and left the ignorant beholders spellbound. Behold! they were moving with military precision, a brother of the Sultan at the head, followed by an extremely wide row of mounted soldiers, carrying silken standards of all colors.

Scattered over the face of the cliff doors and windows, narrow stairways and little belvederes could be seen, habitation upon habitation, in most picturesque disorder. Walls along the high road hid the immediate foreground, and we looked in vain for an opening by which we could have a nearer view of this strange community. At last we found an open gate, and, peeping through, were greeted by a dear little old woman, whose wrinkled, smiling face was surmounted by a snowy white cap. Her doorway was a bower of flowers, hollyhocks, asters, marigolds and deep June roses. By its side was an old well, and a little outhouse for her wood and gardening tools. Her cheery "bonjour" was an invitation to enter, and we gladly accepted her cordiality. We followed her across the little yard, and were soon seated in her one and only room.—[Scribner's Magazine.]

The Valley of the Yoho.

THE Yoho Valley has only begun to be talked about quite recently. Although its mouth, since the opening of the railway, has been passed and repassed annually by many thousands of persons, no one seems to have thought about exploring it, and until five years ago it had not even got a name. In 1897 the Herr Jean Habel of Berlin went to its head, and short as the distance was, took seventeen days to get there from Field and back again. But at that time there were no paths or trails of any sort in the Yoho, and travel was laborious and slow. This was brought out very clearly in the paper that Herr Habel contributed to the publication of the Appalachian Club of Boston. Most of his troubles arose from keeping along the bottom, in virgin forest. Desirous to avoid them, we sought for a spot which would divide the valley from one end to the other, and give a coup d'oeil of the whole, and found one about 2000 feet above the railway, half way up between Mt. Stephen and the Great Divide.

Our first glimpse of the Yoho Valley would have delighted the heart of J. M. W. Turner, R.A. Snow-clad mountains in the far distance partly veiled in mystery; clouds and cloud shadows floating about, letting in light here, and causing gloom there, leaving play to the imagination; bringing out in a manner that perfect sunlight would not have done the movements and accidents of its undulations, and the picturesqueness of its form. There is no way, as yet, made through its mouth, just where it joins the Kicking-Horse River, and to make one will be a matter of considerable trouble and expense.—[Scribner's Magazine.]

House Built of Beer Bottles.

AHOUSE of beer bottles is one of several startling architectural novelties in Tonopah, Nev. Among the other houses made of straw, of burlap sacks trimmed with blue jeans, of tin from five-gallon oil cans, of dry goods and cracker-box lumber, of mud, stone, tents and tots. The reason for this notable and original variety of building material is simple. Tonopah is in a region barren of trees. In consequence the commonest lumber sells for $65 a thousand feet, while an inferior grade of scrub cedar fuel costs $22 a cord.

Tonopah is a young mining camp, and its riches are still mostly underground. Therefore the need for economy and thence the origin of William F. Peck's glass house.

Peck is a miner in the employ of the Tonopah Mining Company, and he has a family. He went there in July when houses are not strictly necessary. Being unable to buy lumber, and empty beer bottles being available in astonishing numbers, he chose these, and went to work at odd times. By October his house was finished, and the chief expense was for water with which to mix his mud and plaster. Water costs $1.50 a barrel in Tonopah in summer.

Ten thousand beer bottles were incorporated in the next little edifice, which was 16x20 feet in the clear, with ceilings eight feet high, and contained two rooms. That Mr. Peck had an eye to artistic effect as well as to warmth and convenience, is evidenced by the neatness of the workmanship, and also his adherence to color scheme. The northern and western exposures are composed of bottles of a light green hue, while the other sides are almost black.

The inside walls are plastered with lime, which is spread to a depth sufficient to cover the bottle necks.—[New York World.]

When a Sultan Travels.

IN the morning at 4 o'clock, the bugle sounded to break camp; the foot soldiers arose, pulled up their tent pegs, and were away in the darkness. Gradually the remaining tents came down, and the throng of Arabs were on the move. The Sultan's tent remained. A little to one side his ministers and kaisds patiently waited, the latter forming a hollow square, at one end of which stood the ministers, while in front of them a spacious blue and gold chair awaited its sacred occupant.

Presently the wall opened and he appeared, his mask-like visage turning neither right nor left. With garments swaying rhythmically he walked to the chair and seated himself. A slave at his side fanned him with a white silken cloth, to defend his sacred master from imaginary insects. He whispered to the slave, who called to one of the ministers. Hurriedly he appeared, lowering his hood; then, after removing his slippers just back of His Majesty, presented himself, and after a short conversation was dismissed. Presently five gorgeously saddled horses were brought before their royal master, who, with a motion of his hand, chose one, the others being taken away, while he rose with great solemnity, and mounting, rode to all sides of the square, to be saluted by each body of soldiers. This ceremony completed, the musicians, armed with oboes and tomtoes, disturbed the atmosphere with a doleful prehistoric dirge, and the procession was under way. It was but an entanglement of artillery, infantry, flags, horsemen and court officials in a mad riot, but as in a thrashing machine tearing its insides furiously, the wheat, straw and chaff found their channels at once, and left the ignorant beholders spellbound. Behold! they were moving with military precision, a brother of the Sultan at the head, followed by an extremely wide row of mounted soldiers, carrying silken standards of all colors.

Then came the artillery, rattling and bumping, and coming to grief often where the roads were bad. Next followed mounted soldiers and a score of government officials, a sort of police. After a short space, riding alone, came the kaid of the mishwa (master of ceremonies) very straight and very black, picturesquely hugging his gun close to him.

After him followed four led horses, abreast, all richly mounted, for the Sultan's use, should he tire of his mount. Then, with some distance intervening, came the Sultan alone, save for six black slaves, who kept up a continual wafting of white cloths in the direction of his face.

A palanquin containing the blue chair then appeared, carried between two mules, just in front of another row of mounted standard bearers, followed by the Minister of War and the important members of the court. All were obliged to turn aside and make way for this cavalcade.—[Century Magazine.]

Picturesque Astoria.

ASTORIA is one of the most picturesque of American towns, quaint and old, having been founded by the early explorers and trappers who came to this country nearly a hundred years ago. Long the outpost of John Jacob Astor's trading company, it was once taken by the British and held as a frontier fort. Placed here on the steep river edge, where there was rightly no room for a city, and finding it difficult to crowd its way up the hill, the town has reached out over the river, many of the streets, banks, stores, hotels, eateries and waysides being set up on piling, with the tide sweeping through underneath. Step off the sidewalk and drop twenty feet into salt water; look through the cracks in the little court of the hotel and see the dark river swirling beneath, and smell the barnacled pilings. Even the railroad that now reaches the town comes in on legs, centipede-like, a long bridge of piers across a river bay.

It is a strange, interesting, not unambitious old town, set about with net-drying platforms, slippery fish wharves, canneries exhaling the odor of cooking fish, the little low homes of fishermen and net makers of many nationalities, from Norwegian to Portuguese; crowded tenements of Chinese and Japanese workers in the canneries; and, higher up the hill, the more pretentious homes of the packers and business men. Here and there an Indian or two, remnants of a passing tribe, look on imperturbably at the usurpation of their ancient fishing places. When the tide favors, the river beyond the wharves is busy with the heavy boats of the fisheries, and often, more distant, on the mighty river one sees an ocean craft bound up for Portland or down again to the sea.—[Century Magazine.]

In Picturesque India.

OUR way was along the Alipur road, the big main artery, where every hour of the day ox carts and strings of camels jostle ekkas filled to overflowing with fat and complacent natives, who seem gifted with some special faculty for balancing themselves on a few inches of splash board; tongas, too, with wretched ponies, which decline to move at any other pace than the gallop, and endless streams of transport and supply carts, with mules that lean in upon each other at such an angle that you never cease wondering how they manage to keep their footing at all in the greasy state of the road when the bhismates have just watered it, says L. Raven Hill. A most wonderful sight, that Alipur road—every race in India passing along, and always in a hurry. As we drew near the frontier and Punjab camps one remarked on the difference in the types seen on the road—tall, book-nosed, fierce-looking men from Cabul and Peshawar, with high, conical caps, with black waistcoats on yellow fur-lined jackets over long shirts and baggy trousers; loutish overcoated tribes from Gilgit, looking more like Caucasians than inhabitants of India, in their woolen caps and heelless boots, seeming to terrify the sightseeing Babus, who wandered meekly, hand in hand, quite as interested as the English globe trotter.

After breakfast with the political agent, the fantastical Akali Sikhs were shown us, with their strange blue headresses, nearly three feet high, ornamented with crescent-shaped knives, bearing axes, bows and arrows, spears, daggers and swords; with their chain armor, breastplates and shields, they suggested a traveling museum rather than warriors. Here, also, were the devil dancers from the Thibetan border, wearing grotesque masks, whose clumsy dancing suggested the ravings of some virago in an East End slum rather than anything diabolical.—[Pall Mall Magazine.]

On a Barren Shore.

IN bygone times it was the practice of the Newfoundland coast folk to appropriate everything they secured, but this lawlessness had to be sternly repressed. Now the unwritten rule is that they get "half their hand," or 50 per cent. as salvage. In portable and valuable articles such as silverware, there is still a strong temptation to keep the whole, but the punishment is severe. Champagne, liquors, cabin stores and the like have also a trick of disappearing, and in the poorest fisher's cottage you will come upon rare china, dainty napery, silverware of price, and wines that tempt an epicure. The savages are reckless and unthinking, and as they gather in hundreds every man preempts what he can. In the rush there is much destroyed. When the Hurder was lost, in 1882, they burned whalebone worth $10,000 a ton to save leather costing 20 cents a pound. In the Emmeline wreck of 1900 they tramped crates of costly glassware to get at four cases of French prayerbooks valued at 25 cents apiece. On one occasion two salvagers had got ashore a piano, and were adopting the Solomon-like expedient of sawing it in half when a shrewd chum bought it from them for a bottle of whisky purloined from the captain's cabin. When the Grasmere went ashore in 1890 every man on the shore provided himself with a German concertina, of which instruments of torture she had a large consignment, and to secure these packages of much more costly freight were thrown overboard. When the Orion, from Baltimore for Copenhagen, struck the back of Cape Race, and went to pieces, she had a large consignment of bicycles on board, and they were auctioned in St. Johns and disposed of all over the island. The Abbeymore's loading, in 1888, included some cases of splendid English rifles, for Canada, and these are now to be seen adorning every fisher's cottage along the shore.—[McClure's Magazine.]

the coiled and stitched until a sphere large enough for the crown of the hat is made.

To form the sides of the hat the braid, as it is coiled, is sewed to the center of the one above, and so on until the proper depth is obtained. For the rim the braid is fastened out and sewed. If the plait is pulled a little tight on the edge the rim will roll.

Simple baskets are made like the crown of the hat. A plaited handle can be added.

Baskets and hats made over the rattan reeds are more elaborate. The simple hats can be bent into any shape desired, and are light and picturesque.

Many pretty things can be made of this inexpensive material-knotted work bags, to be lined with silk, twine bags, and table mats, to give a bit of color in orange, red or green.

"POLLY PIPER" PORCH PARTY.

ONE OF MANY AMUSING WAYS TO ENTERTAIN GUESTS.

By a Special Contributor.

Porch parties are now the vogue. A clever hostess mostly sent out invitations for a "Polly Piper" party. The cards gave no clew to the nature of the affair, and each guest was left to wonder what a "Polly Piper" might be.

When the guests assembled on the wide porch, they found it set with low tables and chairs of all sorts and conditions. Gay cushions promised comfort, plants and hanging baskets offered sweetness, but no "Polly Piper" was in evidence.

On the small tables an array of clay pipes was spread, all new and sweet smelling. Were the fair guests inclined to a smoker? The appearance of the hostess, seated down with sheaves of tissue and crêpe paper of every imaginable shade, with scissors and with mucilage bottle, relieved their perplexity. When she announced that each guest must make her own "Polly Piper," there was an instant babel of questions and exclamations.

Each guest was given a pipe, with instructions that she was to dress it within forty-five minutes, at the end of which time prizes were to be awarded to the two whose work should be judged best. Each one might select three strips of paper from which to fashion a costume. To make the doll complete, each one must have a face drawn, also.

The guests went immediately to work, selecting their papers with reference to the character which their particular doll was to assume. Gray and white papers were chosen for the doll which was to don Quaker garb; navy blue and red for the Salvation Army girl; blue and white for the yachting costume, while the gayest colors on the table went to rig out a veritable Topsy. Needles, thread and thimbles were furnished, and paste for those who preferred to use it.

After selecting her materials, each guest was expected to test herself as far as possible from the others, in order to give undivided attention to her own doll. At first it seemed impossible to do anything with the awkward pipe, but by degrees the interest quickened, and one after another became absorbed in her work.

At the end of the time allowed the dolls were required to be handed in for criticism. There were babies in long dresses, ballet girls in short, full skirts, summer girls with frou-frou of drapery, full ruffs of softly crumpled paper and picture hats, nursemaids—indeed, all kinds of dolls were represented. But the first prize was given to "Little Red Riding Hood," whose costume was not only well made, but whose face had been drawn upon paper and fastened over the open end of the pipe, doing away with the little "knob" nose which every other doll possessed. She also had been made complete with paper arms. The second prize was awarded to a Chinese mandarin, whose oriental robes were well simulated.

The award of prizes was followed by the serving of luncheon, and the affair was voted one of the most successful of the season.

DON'TS REGARDING JEWELS.

COLOR OF STONES MUST SUIT HAIR AND EYES PEARLS SOFTEN THE FACE.

By a Special Contributor.

Don't wear jewels without first making a study of your style and coloring.

Don't despise coral, if you are a brunette. It is the stone which most becomes you.

Don't wear a broad band—one of seven strings of pearls, for example—unless you have a swan throat.

Don't wear a long or pendant earring if the neck is long. This style is for the woman with a short neck.

Don't wear bracelets unless you have the knack of turning the wrist to display the jeweled clasp to advantage.

Don't wear a string of pearls unless the neck is white. The less clear in color may have rubies or sapphires as the most becoming stones.

Don't wear a necklace if you have a beautiful neck. The lovely line from the nape of the neck is broken and value lessened by a necklace.

Don't wear a broad gold band. A narrow one is much more becoming to the hand. The present fashion in wedding rings demands a slender circlet.

Don't wear rings recklessly. Many or none is the rule. An exquisite hand requires no jewels, but the charm of a hand perfect in shape is enhanced by a gem of glass.

Don't wear rubies, emeralds and sapphires with any shade of red. They are not for the maid or matron with tallow-hued treases, or with hair that is frayed and tangled.

the brilliancy of eyes and teeth. If eyes are dull, they will appear more so by putting sparkling gems near them.

Don't wear earrings unless the ear is a dainty seashell. Then, if wisely chosen, the rings emphasize the best points in hair, features and complexion, and lend light and color to the face.

Don't be afraid of pearls. Of all precious stones they are the best to soften the face. Another equally becoming stone is the opal. Unfortunately pearls are tears, and opals are bad luck—to those of superstitions mind.

ONION AND ASPARAGUS.

BOTH THESE VEGETABLES ARE RECOMMENDED BY THE PHYSICIANS.

By a Special Contributor.

The succulent asparagus and the wholesome onion make their spring entrance together. In the doctor's book of household remedies both vegetables have important places. A free indulgence in asparagus is advised for kidney and liver, while the onion proves a veritable medicine chest, equal to anything from scurvy to smallpox.

While gourmets assert that asparagus is to be perfect should be eaten tepid, the majority of people prefer it hot or cold. Fashion in the last years has run to cold asparagus, with a dressing of salt, pepper, oil, vinegar, and possibly a few finely minced herbs to flavor.

In cooking asparagus not a scrap should be wasted. While the tough, woody stalks are absolutely impossible as a vegetable, they will afford body and flavor to a cream of asparagus soup.

The French method of cooking asparagus is the correct one. Cut off the tough ends, and bind the remaining stalks together in small bunches, with strips of muslin. Boil, standing ends upward, in salted water, allowing the tops to extend two inches out of the water, in order to steam tender, instead of cooking to a frowsy mass and wasting. Cook about half an hour, until tender, and not broken. Remove the stalks from the water, arrange symmetrically on buttered toast, and serve with a sauce of drawn butter. A still more delectable sauce is made from the water in which the asparagus was boiled. Put in a small saucepan a level teaspoonful of flour and a heaped one of butter. Heat until they blend, then stir in a half-cup of the asparagus water, and the same amount of rich cream.

An asparagus omelet is one of the delights of the season. Break four eggs into a bowl and whisk with an egg beater until light and foamy. Add four tablespoonsfuls of cream, a saltspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Have a clean, smooth omelet pan, and melt in it a tablespoonful of butter, letting it run all over the pan. When hissing hot pour the egg mixture into it. As it cooks, prick in several places with a fork to allow the uncooked portions to run under. Lift with the fork until the whole is of a creamy consistency. Have ready several spoonfuls of cooked asparagus points mixed with a little melted butter, a few drops of lemon juice and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Spread evenly over the top of the omelet, double dexterously and shake out of the pan onto a hot platter.

An appetizing asparagus salad is made of the cooked asparagus. After boiling until tender in the manner suggested above, drain well and chill. Put in a salad bowl and cover with a French dressing made to suit the taste of the family. A good proportion for most people is a half-teaspoonful of salt, a dash of white pepper or paprika, four tablespooms of olive oil, and one tablespoonful of vinegar or lemon juice. Mix well and dress the salad. If used for a dinner salad the dressing can be made at the table. The easiest way is to shake it to an emulsion in a bottle.

As is fitting for a vegetable of ancient and distinguished lineage, there are a number of dishes designed especially for the serving of asparagus. Among the newest are platters of Kayserszardin, with broad rims and handles at the ends, in heavy floral designs. These are equipped with a rack on four tiny legs. The English have a combination asparagus rack, tray and sauceboat made in plate and sterling silver.

In Germany the seed of asparagus is used as a substitute for coffee. The supplies come principally from the asparagus fields of Brunswick, where waste seed is plentiful.

For a summer appetizer there is nothing to excel young onions or Bermudas, sliced wafer thin, lightly salted and placed between slices of fresh bread and butter. It is asserted that, taken daily, they will prove more effective than any complexion beautifiers in the market. If one is afraid of the odor, the onions may be laid in ice water for an hour before slicing, and a bit of parsley may be eaten after partaking of them.

An excellent salad may be made by cutting new onions, cucumbers and lettuce together, and then dressing with a French dressing. Onions and tender radishes sliced and dressed with oil and vinegar are appetizing. Callifornians revel in a combination of young onions and delicious ripe black olives, which discount the immature green fruit with which alone most people are familiar.

The nicest way to cook young onions is to cook them tender in boiling salted water, and serve on slices of buttered toast like asparagus. Season with salt, pepper and a little butter.

Onion soup is wholesome and "tasty." Slice two or three large onions and fry until soft in butter or clarified drippings. Add three tablespoomsfuls of flour, and stir until it is a little cooked. To this add slowly a pint of boiling water, stirring until it is smooth. Have ready three potatoes, boiled and mashed, and add to them a quart of milk just scalded. Put the potato and onion mixtures together. Let it get very hot and pass through a strainer into the tureen, which should also be heated. Sprinkle over the top a little parsley chopped fine, and a few croutons.

To make encolloped onions, peel six large onions and lay in cold water for an hour. Cut in thick slices and put on to cook in boiling water. Boil ten minutes, drain, cover again with boiling salted water, cook until they are tender, but still firm, and then drain. Have ready a pint of cream sauce made like that which is the basis for toast, creamed fish, potatoes and the like. It must not be very thick. Butter a baking dish, put in a layer of onions, and one of the sauce sprinkled with bread crumbs. Then put another layer of onions, and so on till the dish is full. Make the last layers of the crumbs and sauce with a few extra bits of butter. Bake in a quick oven till brown. A little layer of cheese may be used with each layer of crumbs if desired.

their early life, even where fruit and water. The young doves are chiding us, we do not have to rely upon the testimony to this effect. The original department of Agriculture found 750 nests in the crop of one nesting dove.

we have had to meet, the apple is in season in greater measure than ever before. The enormous crop of apples raised the increased facilities for keeping the California orange season. The shipping apples in the East is now about $50,000,000, utilized to such an extent in the Eastern markets as to be in the winter. One New York apple grower of Southern California says he plans upon his farm with a capacity of there are immense commercial cities—Philadelphia, Boston, Buffalo, New Haven largely to the storage of apples, price charged by these establishments up to April 10 cents a barrel. Some firms are thus enabled to handle the distributing the fruit evenly throughout securing better average prices and competitors against the orange.

seating influence in this new department. By withdrawing so large a portion of apples from the early fall range will be given early California growers to clear up the season, leaving the market free for oranges. Again, there must be a large number before the profits in easily refrigeration upon a large scale, with last season was over-stocked when the refrigerators had to settle to minimize their losses. With influence, the competition of the shipping phase to the California citrus, increased marketing facilities, the of California oranges and better distribution has, perhaps, assumed its most important.

telephonic connection between the more recently settled sections of Southern California in many localities. On this point he complete says:

"A rural telephone is beginning to be in use in granges and other organizations. While we are far behind the eastern States in telephonic communication, many districts in California are served by this modern convenience. It was one of the earliest districts to be influenced, and the subject was recently discussed at the San Joaquin Farmers' Club. The facts were the people of Edenvale pay $12 a month system, which we may add to our telephone here at Mountain View, a company built and maintains this company maintains the phones. This is not satisfied, and closed their own.

There was much talk about one company, and action was taken by a committee to act in conjunction with the telephone throughout the country. A man came very near organizing an independent system, because of the poor service. A San Jose exchange was in discussions point in one direction, to give and lower rates from the San Joaquin telephone company in this way by the people themselves."

Times, through its daily editorial in a large measure in the postoffice enactments when the "World" legislative last winter for consideration is the agricultural department took no matter how desperate the need of a solution matters, no bill should be introduced till it received the sanction of the State and throughout the State. Whether its origin with men who do the work, some agency recognizing the right to do it as their own is of no moment. New water laws should spring from the state, and if necessary from thorough fundamental principles, and practical men at once fit some of our proposed bills. But they should stand forth by the people most directly, such as the intelligent farmers of the West, with Judge Works the spokesman, and if necessary from the establishment of a desire to have a bill, and pass upon his bill, and a measure upon lines according to the prominent association that had or formulated the measure. Nothing

A. H. DUFF, in Farm, Field and Fireside says: "A best colony of bees in the best possible condition will lose strength during winter, and come out in spring much weaker and with many less bees than it started into the winter with, hence it is readily seen that it is useless to go into winter quarters with weak colonies. Some weak colonies may survive the winter, but they cannot build up in spring to be of any service the following honey season. It is far better to put two weak ones together in autumn, or even more than two. A half dozen of them, if need be, is better united. Take away all the queens but one, and this one may be the best in the lot to be left to build up the colony on. The queens will kill each other down to but one, anyhow, and it is best to take all but one away. The queens will, of course, settle this matter between themselves if all are put together, and if the trouble of hunting them out is considered too great, all may be put together. The best way to manage the different hives is to set one over the other, and let the bees come together as suits them, the work being done at late evening. When they have become united and settled, they may all be driven into one hive and furnished honey sufficient. It is best to go to the trouble of caging the queen if we have selected her as the one to give them, and thus keep her caged in with the bees for a day or two. But the danger of losing her is not great, and may be made certain by caging. Uniting colonies thus in autumn is better done early, say during September, but may be put together any time before cold weather. It is best to feed such colonies some sugar until, if the weather is warm enough, otherwise it cannot be done. The principal thing is to furnish them plenty of honey, but if honey is scarce, then the uniting should be done early, and the bees well fed up on sugar stores.

American Flour in Siberia.

COMMERCIAL AGENT R. T. GREENER reports from Vladivostok as follows: The fear of competition from native sources with our flour trade in Siberia has frequently been expressed. The price of flour, American and Manchurian, is advancing in Vladivostok. American flour, in my brief experience, has always been able to hold its own. As much again could have been sold, if in their dealings with Siberian merchants. In one case coming under my immediate notice several hundred sacks of corn meal were substituted for a choice brand of flour. But for instances of similar character our flour would have found a far more extensive market in Siberia.

Notwithstanding the cheapness of Manchurian wheat at $12 to 12 cents gold per pound (36.12 pounds)—and the establishment of several mills of considerable size, Manchurian flour has not yet driven out American flour from Vladivostok, despite the greater cost and added duty, nor is there any visible diminution in the demand for our staple.

Two days ago the steamship Lyra of the new Seattle-Vladivostok line brought 84,000 pounds (3,033,408 pounds) of American flour from Portland, and several smaller orders have been placed within the month.

FRUIT INTERESTS.

California's Opportunity.

CONSULAR report that conveys news of much value and interest to the fruit growers of this country is sent from Bordeaux by Alphonse W. Tougee, our Consul there. He writes relative to the effect of the frost of April, which were of a most serious character, on the French crops:

"All fruit with the exception of pears is said to be absolutely destroyed. The most important consequence of this is the failure of the French prune crop, the destruction of which is reported to be practically complete, and as this follows the poor crop of last year, the country is without any reserve supplies except what may be left of last season's importations from California. Should the failure of this crop be as sweeping as now indicated, it will be a fact decided interest to California prune growers and dealers."

"As the other fruits which are prepared here in large quantities have also been destroyed, thousands of laborers will be thrown out of employment. There will probably be an increased demand for the better qualities of dried apples. There will of necessity be a scarcity of other fruit products which are largely exported to the United States, such as cherries and apricots, etc."

Writing on the same subject, Consul B. H. Ridgeley of Nantes says:

"The whole crop of the early potatoes is lost. Of the fruits it is stated that 90 per cent of the peaches, 98 per cent of apricots, and 80 per cent of plums are lost; while the apples, pears and cherries have suffered to some extent, but much less.

"It seems to me that the opportunity for exporting fresh fruits, such as apples, peaches and pears, from the United States to France during the approaching summer is well worth considering. Fresh fruits are relatively dear in France, and owing to the largely decreased production, prices will be almost prohibitive. If our fruits could be landed here in fairly good condition, there would undoubtedly be a big demand for them at good prices. The duties on fresh fruits are small, from 58 to 97 cents per 100 kilograms (220 pounds), and there are no other entry charges of importance. If our fruit handlers would send representatives to Paris at once, they could easily make arrangements with the big fruit houses to handle several cargoes."

"There will also be an enlarged opening for our dried fruits—prunes, apples, etc. I would call the attention of our dried-fruit exporters to the fact that several reliable commission merchants have asked me to put them into communication with exporters who would like to ship direct from the United States to Nantes."

THE APIARY.

Keep the Colonies Strong.

H. DUFF, in Farm, Field and Fireside says: "A best colony of bees in the best possible condition will lose strength during winter, and come out in spring much weaker and with many less bees than it started into the winter with, hence it is readily seen that it is useless to go into winter quarters with weak colonies. The Poultry Yard.

Henleyville Wyandottes.

THE California hen is distinguishing herself in faraway Australia. Press reports received show that the three coops of American chickens sent to Australia to compete in an international egg-laying contest, under government supervision in the Agricultural College at Sydney, have been almost certain of taking first, second and fourth prizes on the list. One of the three coops is from California, and is said to be upholding the State's reputation for poultry raising.

Last February, in response to the challenge of Australian poultrymen for America to send three coops to take part in a "laying competition," the fanciers of this country prepared to do battle. A great number of breeders signified their willingness to send birds, but as the rules allowed three pens only, the selection was made by lot. The choice fell upon W. K. Hays, Henleyville, Tehama county, Cal.; White Wyandottes; Mrs. A. H. Hansel, Long City, Neb., Single-comb Brown Leghorns, and W. B. Canfield, Fayetteville, N. Y., White Wyandottes.

The rules called for six pullets in each pen, and they were shipped from San Francisco about the middle of February in order to have a short time in which to get acclimated.

What the California hens with their sister Americans did to their rivals of less favored climates is stated in a Sydney telegram as follows:

"So rapidly grew the pile of white eggs from the three American coops when the word 'go' was given that inside of a week the other nationalities were left hopelessly in the rear."—[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Looking into the window of a Broadway establishment, where the dollar diamond scintillates with undisputed brilliancy, were two youths, and they were discussing a wedding which one had attended. Describing the wedding presents, he said:

"Oh yes, the bride had a diamond pendant, the gift of the groom, and a great many other fine pieces of cut glass."—[New York Times.]

Rabbit Thistle.

In speaking of this noxious weed, a gentleman who has spent two or three days thistle-hunting, says the farms at Artesia believe that one summer's war against it will bring its career to a close. In most localities before suffering from the prevalence of thistle, the weed has not grown to proportions allowing it to spread over large stretches of ground and seed them for another year. Should the Russian thistle become exterminated this season at Artesia, Redondo and toward the southern farming districts, the cutting over of 10,000 acres last year will not be in vain. The farmers have cooperated very successfully in most sections, some trouble having been experienced with the larger ranches, especially near Alamitos.

Southern California has one pest that exceeds all others in the noxious line, and so common that its ravages are not taken into account. It is foxtail grass, Hordeum murinum of the botanist. This grass is the special enemy of the alfalfa-grower. But it does more damage to the wild pasture than all the other pestiferous weeds combined. This grass crowds out beneficial pasture grasses and succulents wherever it gets a hold, and it is particularly aggressive in a season like this. A friend writes that constant cutting is the only way to keep foxtail from dominating. I fear this will not do it, as the foxtail, although an annual, thrives all winter and naturally almost every month of the year under some conditions. This grass may be controlled in the alfalfa by constant cutting, but its greatest damage is wrought to wild vegetation, being worthless itself as pasture. Mark foxtail down as the greatest enemy the stockman has in California and Arizona. There is no way to control it.

No Abandoned Farms.

In California, where there are no abandoned farms except those so dry they were never really farms, the spectacle of "turned-out" fields and abandoned pasture lands is never seen. Ten years ago the farms of New England had been abandoned to such an extent that the public attention was called to it all over the country through agricultural conventions and articles in the press and standard magazines. On the authority of the Boston Journal of Commerce it is now stated that there are no abandoned farms in Massachusetts. They have all been purchased, some for residences, for timber, "poultry-raising, but more than half of them for agricultural purposes pure and simple. High prices of produce have revived this decaying industry, and scientific farming will maintain it largely through all conditions that may come. This is a warning to the West that hereafter farming must be conducted upon a more economic basis even where the natural resources of the land are practically boundless.

LOS ANGELES SUNDAY TIMES.

[June 21, 1903.]

The Development of the Great Southwest.

OUR MATERIAL GROWTH.

WHAT IS BEING DONE IN THE FIELD

OF PRODUCTION.

Compiled for The Times.

The Times will be pleased to receive and publish in this department brief plain and artistic giving noteworthy information on important developments in Southern California, and adjoining territories; such articles to be confined to actual work in operation, or about to begin, excluding rumors, and contemplated enterprises.

Developing Electric Power.

ONE of the most interesting and important developments now under way in Southern California is that of the Edison Electric Company, in Santa Ana Cañon, where a power-house is located, from which electricity is sent over the wires, a maximum distance of eighty-three miles, to furnish light and power to Los Angeles, Pasadena and intermediate cities.

The power-house is located in the picturesque cañon of the Santa Ana River, about ten miles from Crafton, and fifteen miles from Redlands. It is a cement building, 36x127 feet in dimensions, equipped with all the latest improvements that electrical science can suggest, and is regarded by experts as a model plant. The equipment was designed by O. H. Ensign, consulting engineer of the company, B. F. Pearson being the official in charge of all stations and construction. The inside of the power-house looks like a jewelery store, and the great switchboard is a marvel of electrical ingenuity. The water is brought down through a series of tunnels and flumes, extending for a distance of about three miles. The tunnels through the solid granite are 4½x6 feet in dimensions, involving an immense amount of work. Occasionally, when John B. Miller of Pasadena, the president of the company, pays a visit to the works with some of the stockholders and friends, he has a boat taken up to the head of the tunnel from the power-house, for a distance of about two and a half miles. This involves much labor and time, but the trip down the tunnel, through the heart of the granite mountains, is made with great rapidity. This is probably the most unique boat ride in the world.

The power-house contains four immense generators, each with a capacity of 1000 kilowatts. For the benefit of the uninformed, it may be explained that a "kilowatt" is equivalent to one and one-third horse power. The water is conducted to the power-house from an elevation of 728 feet, giving a pressure of 315 pounds to the square inch. This immense pressure is scarcely conceivable. It would cut through a man's body as a knife cuts cheese. After passing through the power-house the water rushes like a miniature Niagara into the tail race. It may readily be believed that exceedingly powerful machinery is necessary to stand such a tremendous strain. The pipe which brings the water down is thirty inches in diameter, and varies from one-tenth of an inch to a little over half an inch in thickness. The electric energy is generated at a pressure of 750 volts and is raised before leaving the building to a pressure of 33,000 volts. There is available an average of 2000 inches of water in the summer season, and in the winter the amount sometimes runs up to 100,000 inches. In fact, in some winters, such as the last, there has been too much water for comfort, the roaring torrent tearing up the road down the cañon, and doing some other damage. However, this is far preferable to a shortage of water. The power developed at the power-house is equivalent to 4000 horse power. It is obtained from the water power derived from mountain waters, unless the water is raised before leaving the building to a pressure of 33,000 volts. from that source, and the pigs completed to Ronquillo, and the pigs will give these towns an abundant supply from two independent sources, the pigs also being piped to Ronquillo and the drawback to residence in Cananea (a good sewerage system) has been removed. The homes in Cananea are scattered everywhere.

Rubber is not altogether dependent upon this mill of course always in the lumber and cattle interests one of the finest timber in the world comes from the Sierra Madre. The extension to the coal fields of La Barra and the cheap fuel problem, while in Cananea promising indications that in the near future an electric power plant will connect all portions of the city, blocks and residences are being built. It is admitted that there is nothing Cananea's growth, and that there is no confidence in its future."

ross recently published the following statement concerning the Colorado River section to Los Angeles:

"Southern California, while growing rapidly, has not developed equally in all directions. The river country is just what needs to round out its industries into a great center. Along the river there will be opportunities for which there is a great demand, to make up the coming colonies of many products raised near the river.

Los Angeles will continue to receive the new country remains to be done by the building of its projected railroads, it will be able to boast of a greater extent and productivity than itself."

Any this country turns in the hand of directing influence. If it is to be won—destiny, that destiny will be won in an industrial system as independent as Los Angeles business men are to form financial alliances with the work for favorable transportation and mutual benefit, that city will become tributary to it. And, by shortening the distance to seaport and better transportation, nothing will detract from the chief benefit of the valley.

Look for the Los Angeles newspaper to give the coming country as a positive interest of Los Angeles, but to a final determination of the point, however, may really be found to bring connection, it may be well to say.

Los Angeles financial interests in the valley, have stood and are standing country most satisfactorily. They are mainly conservative, and are holding up of new territory, and I studied this field have almost won that Los Angeles wants the Imperial.

Other Los Angeles interests have much to still further strengthen.

A Good Physician Gone.

D R. CARL SCHWALBE, who died in Los Angeles on June 14, was a thoroughly conscientious physician, and a great student. He administered little or no drugs, and was very successful in the cure of disease without them. He made somewhat of a specialty of the treatment of diphtheria and goitre. Dr. Schwalbe had been a physician in the German army during the Franco-German War. He also lived in tropical countries, and of late years devoted much of his time to experiments for the purpose of showing, as he claimed, the groundlessness of the theory that yellow fever and malaria are disseminated by mosquitoes. In pursuance of this investigation, about a year ago, he spent several months at one of the worst malarial-infested spots of Central America. He has written several treatises on the subject, which have been printed in German medical publications.

Insonnia.

A CORRESPONDENT writes for a few suggestions to help him sleep in the daytime, after having been on his feet all night.

If you are so unfortunate as to have to turn night into day, it is a good plan to carry out the idea to its logical extent. When you stop work in the early morning, instead of rushing off to bed, go and have a good square meal, to take the place of dinner or supper, or whatever you call it. Then spend an hour or so reading or in any other way that may appeal to you, after which go to bed.

Otherwise, see remarks on insomnia, published in this department a short time ago, in reply to another correspondent.

Gastric of the Stomach.

K. H. sends the following communication addressed to the "Editor of the Health Department."

"I have been a close observer of your various statements with regard to the treatment of catarrh of the stomach and intestines, and have attempted to follow them out. I find, however, that the milk diet, which you suggest, affects me in a rather unfavorable manner, causing great depression, lassitude, and also affecting the head. An addition to the milk of lime water or essence of peppermint had been recommended as a remedy, but in neither case was any benefit derived.

"I now wish to know if such conditions as these are to be expected, when following out this course. If not, I will consider it a great favor if you will kindly give any beneficial."
